Print and On-line Resources for Learning Strategies and Styles in Foreign Language Education

NB: This list contains a small sampling of available materials regarding foreign language learning strategies and styles. Many of the on-line resources contain tests and activities that you and your students may find fun and useful. The literature in this field is rich and extensive and is worth exploring beyond this bibliography.

Books and Articles

Smith, G. and S. Throne. “Differentiating Instruction in the AP Spanish Classroom.” *College

Internet Resources and Assessment Tools
The following websites offer a selection of on-line and printable assessment tools and information about learning styles, suitable for teacher preparation or for sharing with students.

http://www.sil.org/lglearning/preparing.htm
Preparing for Language Learning
At this website, your students can prepare for self-directed language learning by learning language acquisition principles. They can also discover their own learning style and implications of that style for the way they will go about learning a second language.

http://www.engr.ncsu.edu/learningstyles/ilsweb.html
Index of Learning Styles Questionnaire, by Barbara Solomon and Richard Feldman “Differentiated Instruction,” Internet4Classrooms.

Site offers extensive links for learning style inventories, including a variety of classifications not discussed here. Gives practical tips and sample classes from many different school subjects.

“What’s Your Learning Style?” Edutopia.
This resource is an easy-to-use tool for elementary through high school students for learning more about learning styles based on the theory of Multiple Intelligences. It includes suggestions for learning across a variety of subjects. http://www.edutopia.org/mi-quiz

All on-line sources verified August 15, 2015.